Brent R. Baker Speaks on Challenges Facing the Legal Profession in Utah Business

Spencer Fane attorney Brent R. Baker was quoted in the article What AI Can't Do in a Courtroom, recently published by Utah Business.

The article covers a roundtable discussion featuring legal industry leaders who examined major trends shaping the legal profession, including artificial intelligence, hybrid work models, talent retention, regulatory changes, and evolving client expectations. Participants discussed how technology is transforming legal services, the importance of maintaining client relationships, and the difficulties firms face in adapting to a rapidly changing industry.

When discussing challenges facing the legal profession in the coming years, Brent said, "At the national level, we're seeing things that we're just shocked about, and no one seems to care. It's the general erosion of respect for our profession, and we're seeing that in spades now."

At the firm, Brent advises global companies, board committees, executives, and registered entities in complex criminal and civil investigations and litigation related to public and private securities regulation and compliance, employing previous experience as senior special counsel for the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission to form robust defense strategies and curate a track record of success.
