

Helen Holden Looks at Lessons Learned in Employment Law During COVID-19 Pandemic

Spencer Fane attorney Helen Holden recently published an article as part of a larger cover story for In Business Magazine. The cover story focused on advice for businesses as they recover from the COVID-19-related disruption.

Titled "Pandemic Presents Learning Opportunities for Employers," Helen's feature discussed recent employment litigation and stressed the importance of documentation and communication.

"If the company is confident that it has taken the appropriate steps to address safety in its response to the pandemic, then the company should examine whether it has communicated its efforts to employees so that each and every employee understands those efforts and their own role in ensuring safety and health during the pandemic," Helen explained in the article."

To read the full cover story, please click here.