

Jamie Dickinson Establishes Nonprofit Focused on Community and Literature

Spencer Fane attorney Jamie Dickinson recently founded Gathered Pages Collective, a nonprofit organization dedicated to fostering connection, conversation, and belonging among women through free book club experiences.

Founded on the belief that literature can inspire reflection and build community especially when shared, Gathered Pages Collective provides complete Book Club Boxes at no cost to shelters, recovery programs, senior centers, and schools serving women. Each box includes individual copies of a selected book, journals, pens, bookmarks, and guided discussion materials designed to broaden perspectives, build lasting connections, and encourage women through their toughest challenges.

The organization also seeks to support women-owned businesses by sourcing books, supplies, and other materials from women entrepreneurs whenever possible.

"Gathered Pages Collective grew out of my own lifelong relationship with the transformative power of books. They help me find clarity and support through life's difficulties, widen my understanding, and help me foster meaningful friendships," said Jamie. "It's a new and fulfilling chapter in my life to help other women do the same."

A member of the Spencer Fane Real Estate practice group, Jamie is a passionate advocate for her clients. Her people-focused approach extends to community engagement and lifelong learning, as evidenced by her launch of Gathered Pages Collective and other civic involvements.
