

SpencerFane®

Jeremy Moseley Discusses Impact of Data Privacy Verdict with The Recorder

Spencer Fane attorney Jeremy Moseley was recently quoted in The Recorder's article, ‘Another Notch in the Plaintiffs’ Side’: Experts Weight Impact of Meta Privacy Verdict Ahead of Damages Phase.

In the piece, Jeremy and several other legal thought leaders in discussing how the recent verdict in Frasco et al. v. Flo Health Inc – a high-profile data privacy case that determined the defendants violated the California Invasion of Privacy Act – may influence future litigation, data regulation, and business practices. Jeremy opined that tech companies will likely update their data collection consent practices to be more “robust and clear.”

“The case ends with the collection of the data,” he said. “It doesn’t matter that it was anonymized after that. So that, I think, is going to be a big focus on the tech company side.”

At Spencer Fane, Jeremy defends mass actions and class action in venues throughout the country, using his breadth of experience in highly regulated industries to instill confidence for clients facing difficult and uncertain circumstances. He has also won multiple complex commercial trials, defeated class certification in multiple states, and defended multiple mass torts nationwide.

Read the full article here. Please note, a subscription may be required.