Kami Hoskins Outlines State of ESG Compliance for Corporate Counsel

Spencer Fane attorney Kami Hoskins recently authored an article for Corporate Counsel's ongoing Expert Opinion feature.

Her article, ESG Compliance Should Remain Under Consistent Review in 2025, originated as a firm blog post and explores U.S. companies' increasing involvement with Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) regulations. Kami discussed the fluctuating state of related federal laws and legislative activity in California, Colorado, Illinois, New Jersey, and New York.

"For those executives, ESG and sustainability specialists, internal auditors, compliance practitioners, and in-house counsel tasked with navigating ESG compliance, the time to engage is now with 2025 poised to usher in increasing regulatory oversight of climate-related financial risk and greenhouse gas (GHG) disclosures – primarily at the state level," she said.

At the firm, Kami creates and implements effective solutions for employers navigating complex labor and employment law issues. She provides meticulous defense in state and federal courts as well as before the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, National Labor Relations Board, and the Arizona Attorney General's Office.
