Spencer Fane attorneys Kersten Holzhueter and Stephen Zralek recently attended the International Association of Defense Counsel (IADC)'s Annual Midyear Meeting in Dana Point, California, an opportunity to both provide and absorb insights from leading attorneys around the world. Kersten served as a featured speaker for the event while Stephen played a pivotal role in coordinating the meeting's programming as chair of the event's CLE Steering Committee.

The association's 2025 spring meeting topics included defending against attempts to politicize the judiciary, handling Rambo tactics in litigation, and the evolution of NIL rights for college athletes, as well as overarching themes of cultivating management skills in future leaders, retaining and supporting diverse attorneys, and managing cross-office and cross-generational teams. Kersten co-led a session titled, "Winning the War for Talent: Finding, Developing, and Keeping Future Firm and In-House Leaders." In it, she provided guidance for mentoring attorneys in a rapidly shifting legal landscape. Spencer Fane attorney and IADC member Erik Solverud was also part of this team. At the opening session, Stephen previewed what attendees could expect. He also shared his excitement as a featured speaker on the association's official podcast, IADC Speaks. The event's comprehensive list of featured speakers included state and federal judges, professors, college athletes, public relations professionals, and attorneys from leading U.S. and international firms and corporations.
