Mary A. Clarke Discusses Move to Spencer Fane in Law360

Spencer Fane attorney Mary A. Clarke discusses her recent move to the firm in the article Spencer Fane Adds GrayRobinson Atty To Food & Bev Team, published by Law360.

In the Law360 feature, Mary highlighted the rapidly evolving nature of hemp beverage regulation, stating, "I just think it's fascinating, because it's super fast-paced. I did some research on it last week, and that's going to be out of date." Mary goes on to say she is excited to build on her experience helping clients navigate complex regulatory frameworks, noting, "I'm really excited to capitalize on that foundation that I've learned and help business owners do what they want to do. Whether it be a compliance issue or a growth issue."

Washington, D.C., Office Managing Partner Bill Powers' comments in a firm statement were also highlighted. "Mary's dynamic in-house and legislative background will be a fantastic complement to her private sector work as she collaborates with our Florida team and continues to bring national attention to this influential practice area," Bill said.

At Spencer Fane, Mary guides businesses and key stakeholders through all regulatory, legislative, and compliance matters impacting the alcohol and hemp beverage industry, proactively managing risk and creating adaptable frameworks for rapidly evolving regulatory and enforcement policies. Her strategic counsel also extends to emerging and other highly regulated products and industries, including hemp-derived products.
