

SpencerFane®

Megan Early-Soppa Earns 2025 Women in Business Honor

Spencer Fane is pleased to announce attorney Megan Early-Soppa's inclusion in Greenville Business Magazine's 2025 Women in Business.

This list honors a select group of South Carolina women making a positive impact in their industries and communities. In addition to an awards luncheon on July 16, Megan and her fellow honorees were formally celebrated in the publication's Women in Business special feature in which they shared their stories and advice.

In her profile, Megan shared her gratitude for the mentorship she has received from Spencer Fane Greenville Office Managing Partner Kurt Rozelsky.

"Kurt Rozelsky has been more than just a mentor to me; he truly embodies what it means to be a sponsor. I am honored to call him my friend. Kurt has consistently advocated for me, from hiring me for my first significant role at a major firm to welcoming me into Spencer Fane 10 years after we first worked together," Megan said. "He has always made space for me at the table, provided valuable feedback, served as a sounding board, and been a true cheerleader."

At the firm, Megan's blend of litigation acumen, regulatory insight, and strategic risk management makes her a trusted advisor for clients facing the evolving challenges of the transportation, energy, and environmental sectors. She provides crucial counsel and advocacy for clients navigating the complex intersections of transportation, energy, and environmental law. Her practice is distinguished by a deep focus on risk management, regulatory compliance, and litigation strategy – particularly within the transportation and logistics sectors.

Read Megan's full Women in Business profile here.