

SpencerFane®

Sam Jackson Discusses AI, Growth, and Nashville's Legal Market with Nashville Post

Spencer Fane partner Sam Jackson was recently featured in a Q&A with the Nashville Post, where he shared insights on artificial intelligence (AI), the firm's continued growth in Tennessee, and the addition of a large group of financial services laterals to the Spencer Fane Nashville office earlier this year.

During the interview, Sam discussed the growing impact of AI on the legal profession, noting both the opportunities and challenges presented by rapidly evolving technologies. He also reflected on Nashville's increasingly competitive legal market and the factors driving continued demand for sophisticated legal services in the region.

Additionally, Sam addressed the firm's recent expansion efforts, including the integration of former McGlinchey Stafford attorneys into the firm's Nashville platform. He highlighted how the additions strengthen the firm's capabilities and support its long-term strategic growth in Tennessee and across the Southeast.

As Office Managing Partner of the Spencer Fane Nashville office, Sam represents clients across a broad range of labor and employment, education, and litigation matters. He regularly advises public and private sector organizations on complex legal and workplace issues while helping guide the firm's ongoing growth in the Nashville market.

Read the full Q&A in Nashville Post here.