The session will showcase the key role legal nurses often play in supporting firms as they handle medical imaging for medical malpractice and personal injury cases. Applying her real-world experience, Sarah will explore strategies for identifying clinically significant details to evaluate case merit, what imaging should be requested, and gaps or missing studies; translating imaging findings to support a strong legal narrative; preparing well-organized, expert-ready case materials to streamline collaboration; and strengthening overall case strategy through structured clinical analysis and imaging-informed context.

At Spencer Fane, Sarah harnesses more than a decade of advanced critical care experience for medical record review, imaging interpretation within the clinical context, chronology development, and expert coordination. She is a masters-prepared heart failure critical care registered nurse with a passion for defending Houston area providers, nurses, and healthcare facilities.
