

Spencer Fane Attorneys Provide Guidance on Managing Risk During COVID-19

Spencer Fane attorneys Carly Duvall and Patrick McInerney were recently interviewed for an article in Finance and Commerce covering the considerations businesses should understand to mitigate risk in this time of uncertainty.

Titled “Navigating a new normal for corporate practice,” the article outlines the hurdles firms and businesses may encounter while handling the repercussions of the COVID-19 pandemic. Carly summarized the advice she’s given clients who are considering reopening, and Pat discussed the need to prepare for investigations surrounding COVID-19 related government programs.

“Ultimately I remind my clients that, just because they can reopen doesn’t necessarily mean that they should,” Carly said in the article. “And it definitely means that reopening now probably won’t look like it did before.”
