In his practice, Lodoen has also advised borrowers, receivers, lenders and trade creditors with a focus on the real estate, manufacturing, health care, biotechnology, life sciences, retail, agribusiness, farm and agriculture industries. His farm and ranch background, including an undergraduate degree in agricultural economics and animal science, provides a practical understanding of issues pertinent to the current challenges facing production agriculture. He completed those studies at North Dakota State before obtaining his Juris Doctor from the University of North Dakota School of Law.

Lodoen's work has earned him Transaction of the Year honors twice and Turnaround of the Year once from the Upper Midwest Turnaround Management Association, and he was named The Lawyer of the Year for Litigation – Bankruptcy in Minneapolis by The Best Lawyers in America for 2014, 2018 and 2020. He is active in numerous industry organizations, including the American Bankruptcy Institute where he serves on its Central States Conference Advisory Board. He is also a frequent lecturer and author on various bankruptcy, debtor-creditor, and agriculture issues.
