Spencer Fane to Sponsor FDATA Global Open Finance Summit

September 17, 2026

ET – ET

Sutton Place Hotel | 355 King St W, Toronto, ON M5V 2E7, Canada

Spencer Fane is pleased to serve as a Silver Sponsor for the Financial Data and Technology Association (FDATA)'s 2026 Global Open Finance Summit on September 17 in Toronto. Attorneys Greg Ewing and Mike G. Silver will represent the firm at this industry-leading gathering.

Featuring the insights of U.S. and international regulators, policymakers, and industry leaders, this full-day summit will center on the implementation, cross-border alignment, and key policy considerations of open finance frameworks, including the growing role of agentic AI in enabling consumer-centric financial services. In addition to two Spencer Fane-sponsored breaks that will spark connection over these topics, Greg Ewing will serve as a panelist for the Artificial Intelligence and Write Access in the Age of Open Finance session.

This panel will explore financial institution, fintech, policymaker, and technology provider approaches to AI-enabled financial actions; necessary safeguards for building trust in these technologies; and how open finance frameworks can support innovation while maintaining security and accountability and evolving their agentic systems. Topics will include governance, authentication, liability, consent, and consumer protection.

As part of the Spencer Fane FinTech and Banking & Financial Services teams, Greg, Mike, and other team members harness deep experience across artificial intelligence, technology transactions, cybersecurity, privacy, consumer lending, and financial services regulation to help clients navigate complex legal and business challenges. They advise companies and financial institutions on emerging technologies, regulatory compliance, risk management, and evolving industry requirements so they can operate, innovate, and grow confidently in a fast-moving market.
