Overview

Andrew Johnson calls on his proven experience as a lead trial attorney to provide clients with proactive legal advice to avoid litigation. He also utilizes the full range of dispute resolution options that lead to beneficial outcomes, minimizing reputational and monetary damages incurred in the process.

With a focus on representing companies in a variety of commercial disputes, Andrew brings a proven track record of success in breach of contract, trademark infringement, noncompete, construction, product liability, and transportation litigation. He regularly represents companies in high-dollar lawsuits that can directly impact the company's bottom line, with a commitment to partnering with clients to fully understand litigation goals and business objectives in order to provide the best representation for each unique matter.

Specifically, Andrew's practice focuses on resolving:

- Breach of contract claims stemming from service agreements, insurance policies, and asset purchase agreements.
- Construction-related matters including contractual payment disputes, liens, and performance issues.
- Employment disputes, including enforcement of noncompete agreements and wrongful termination claims.
- Defending large-loss product liability matters nationwide.
