Overview

Angela currently serves a wide variety of clients in civil litigation and environmental matters. She practices utilities law, administrative law (primarily in water and oil and gas), and Native American law. She is dedicated to achieving the best possible outcomes for her clients, whether that be through non-legal solutions, mediation, or winning in court.

While in law school, Angela clerked for the U.S. Department of the Interior Southwest Region Solicitor's Office, the New Mexico Office of the Attorney General, and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Prior to law school, Angela worked in higher education and the nonprofit sector.
