Overview

Anne Sumpter Arney has more than 30 years of experience working with many health care companies and medical professionals. She advises her health care clients on matters related to business law and transactional issues, as well as assisting them in navigating ever changing health care laws and regulations.

Anne's experience includes matters related to preparing and filing Certificate of Need (CON) applications, negotiating a variety of health care provider contracts, and assisting clients with matters that arise from the complex health care laws. In addition to her health law practice, Anne advises both health care and non-health care entrepreneurs on how to start, grow, operate, and sell their businesses.

A third-generation lawyer and active community leader, Anne is a frequent guest speaker on health care and corporate law-related topics for industry and professional associations.
