Overview

Bryan DeMatteo specializes in helping companies nationwide develop, protect, and enforce their patents, trademarks and copyrights. He has extensive experience litigating and prosecuting patents and has actively participated at trial in numerous patent cases. Bryan also represents clients in connection with post-grant proceedings before the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and routinely conducts patent IP due diligence on behalf of his clients (including freedom to operate, infringement and validity opinions), as well as for venture capitalists and other entities, including funds wishing to invest in IP litigation.

Bryan is also admitted to the patent bar, having prosecuted patents for several major corporations. His clients are in a variety of technical industries, including telecommunications, electronics, medical, robotics, computer software, and mechanical.

Prior to attending law school, Bryan was an engineer and hardware designer for multiple technology corporations, gaining unique and specific experience which fostered his seamless transition to providing legal representation for clients across complex technical industries, including telecommunications, electronics, medical devices, robotics, computer software, firearms, and mechanical systems. During this time, he helped design radar and radar jamming systems for military aircraft and IBM's PowerPC processors. He was also the sole hardware designer of a cellular phone system produced by TransSky Corp.
