Overview

Danny Williams helps public and private companies navigate complex transactions, regulatory requirements, and business opportunities so they can achieve specific strategic and operational objectives while reducing and mitigating risks. His practice encompasses a broad range of corporate matters, including mergers and acquisitions, securities compliance, corporate governance, banking and finance, and real estate transactions.

Danny advises clients throughout the life cycle of a transaction, helping them evaluate opportunities, manage associated risks, and address the legal and business considerations associated with growth and investment initiatives.

A significant portion of Danny's practice focuses on the energy and natural resources industry. He represents energy clients in transactional, regulatory, and operational matters and draws on both private practice and in-house experience to provide practical, business-focused counsel. His understanding of the legal, commercial, and operational issues affecting energy companies enables him to help clients navigate a rapidly evolving industry.

Before entering private practice, Danny worked in-house for an energy company and gained firsthand experience with land transactions and negotiations in several major oil and gas producing regions. That background provides valuable insight into the challenges and opportunities facing energy clients and informs his practical approach to problem-solving and strategic planning.
