Overview

David Eiseman brings more than 35 years of experience in commercial litigation, using a strong track record of success to develop and implement dispute resolution strategies for clients across a wide spectrum of complex business disputes. His practice encompasses all phases of litigation, from pre-suit strategy through trial and appeal, in both state and federal courts.

David's litigation work spans both commercial and financial matters, including partnership and shareholder disputes, securities and financial instruments litigation, and cases involving allegations of art fraud and forgery. He also represents clients in matters involving D&O insurance coverage, as well as in actions brought by court-appointed receivers and bankruptcy trustees.

In addition to his courtroom work, David has handled numerous arbitrations and has served as an international arbitrator, further reflecting the breadth and depth of his dispute resolution experience. His strategic approach and trial-tested advocacy have contributed to favorable outcomes for clients in high-stakes, high-complexity matters.
