Overview

Derek Larsen-Chaney helps clients to close real estate deals in an efficient manner while prioritizing the avoidance of any unnecessary or potentially costly delays during and after the transaction. His strong background in real estate is beneficial to his work on property transactions, which he can analyze from a business and legal perspective while understanding the concerns and challenges for stakeholders involved.

This informed counsel comes from Derek's experience prior to entering private practice when he worked as a closing specialist for a Tampa-area title company, where he focused on drafting contracts and managing real estate transactions.

The scope of Derek's private practice includes business and finance matters with a focus on real estate transactions, commercial lending, and estate planning. He assists clients with the creation of business governance documents and works frequently with local, national, and international banks and nontraditional lenders to complete complex commercial lending transactions.

Derek also works with clients in preparing for and restructuring in the wake of mergers and acquisitions, and the acceptance of venture capital and private equity investors. This can include guidance to startups and entrepreneurs in key phases of the processes for secured financing, private placement fundraising, and Securities and Exchange Commission reporting obligations.
