Overview

Ed Perkins is a skillful litigator with extensive experience defending clients in complex commercial disputes, employment discrimination cases, professional malpractice claims, and personal injury claims, limiting reputational and financial liability with innovative strategies backed by decades of litigatory insight. He has tried cases in federal district courts, federal bankruptcy courts, and Texas state courts, where he consistently obtains favorable outcomes for his clients.

With recognized success across broad industries as well as specialized matters, Ed crafts solutions in a heavily personalized manner, reconfiguring tested concepts and robust strategies to meet each client's unique objectives, risks, and business goals. He frequently defends large national businesses and manufacturers against fraud claims, copyright and trademark disputes, personal injury cases, and product liability claims.

He also represents law firms and other employers in high-risk professional malpractice and discrimination matters. Additionally, Ed has assisted property owners and homeowners in several types of property-related litigation.

With a track record that speaks to his artful legal acumen and robust experience, Ed is a frequent author and lecturer in developing successful trial strategies, defending employment discrimination claims, and handling high-stakes trade secret litigation.
