Overview

Hailey Dobin Reichel guides individuals and families through the estate planning and administration process, helping them navigate both legal intricacies and personal considerations as they prepare for the future through proactive strategies for the preservation of wealth. She drafts wills, trusts, powers of attorney, and related documents, and provides research and support on a broad range of estate and trust matters with a focus on efficient and effective transference of assets.

Hailey is particularly committed to ensuring that clients understand their planning options and feel confident making decisions that reflect their goals and values. She brings a thoughtful and client-centered approach to her work, offering clear direction and support in what can often be complex and emotionally sensitive matters.
