Overview

Whether negotiating a venture capital financing or e-commerce agreement or overseeing regulatory compliance for an investment advisor or investment company, James Jacobson works closely with his clients to further their business goals.

During this nearly four decades of practicing business, securities and real estate law, James has represented a range of business entities, including investment advisors, investment companies, institutional venture capital firms, internet companies, medical device developers, software developers, educational institutions and manufacturers, and distributors of various products. For them, he has provided a plethora of services for all aspects of their businesses, from helping them select the best business structure to protecting their intellectual property to making sure they comply with securities regulations, and to negotiating merger or acquisition transactions.

Another important realm of James' practice is real estate, where his experience has included property purchases and sales, construction and permanent financing issues, the establishment of common interest communities, and lease transactions.
