Overview

Jim Loranger helps businesses with mergers and acquisitions, financing of development projects using tax credit incentive programs, corporate governance, planning, and other business transactions.

Jim focuses on helping his clients negotiate and structure sales and purchases of businesses to maximize returns and limit risk. He has broad experience with mergers, stock sales, redemptions, asset purchases and sales, spin-offs, split-ups, and tax-free reorganizations as well as other major corporate and partnership transactions.

He also helps developers and investors structure real estate and infrastructure projects that use tax credits and other governmental incentives as a financing source, including projects that use historic rehabilitation credits, low income housing credits, solar production credits, and tax increment financing.

Additionally, Jim helps corporations, partnerships, and LLCs with internal governance and tax planning issues, including proxy solicitations, preparation of governance documents such as bylaws and operating agreements and structuring of compensation arrangements including equity grants and options.
