Overview

Jamie Guidry represents clients in several types of litigation, including products liability, premises liability, personal injury defense, and labor and employment matters, carefully assessing risks to achieve optimal outcomes aligned with business goals and objectives.

With a service-oriented approach to her practice, Jamie protects clients' public images and financial assets while prioritizing their best interests throughout the litigatory process. She takes a comprehensive approach to dispute resolution, using her background in business administration to identify and implement necessary organizational changes to limit current and future liability.

Prior to entering private practice, Jamie served as a judicial intern to the Hon. Jane Bland in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First District of Texas and to the Hon. Les Hatch in the 237th District Court in Lubbock, Texas.
