Overview

Jessie Padua navigates a wide range of commercial litigation and labor and employment matters, identifying clients' legal objectives and crafting robust strategies for favorable outcomes which advance business interests and bolster overall operations.

Jessie has served as a prominent legal intern in several public and private settings, where she performed research and drafted memoranda, briefs, and other legal documents. In addition to her primary focus areas, she has prior experience curating public policy recommendations and assisting in the research of issues related to immigration law.

While earning her Juris Doctor, Jessie participated in her university's Employment Law Clinic and served as president of the Labor and Employment Law Society.
