Overview

Karen D. Olson is an experienced regulatory, compliance, and litigation attorney that uses her significant government and private practice experience to represent her clients. Most recently, Karen served as Deputy Attorney General for the State of Minnesota for more than a decade. As Deputy Attorney General, Karen represented the Attorney General, Governor, Legislature, and state agencies and boards on complex and high-profile legal matters.

During her tenure at the Attorney General's Office, Karen led the teams of attorneys representing various state agencies and boards and worked closely with the Attorney General overseeing the legal matters and office. Karen served as General Counsel to the Minnesota Board of Medical Practice and managed the attorneys and investigators representing all 17 health related licensing boards. Karen also led the attorneys providing legal representation to the various environmental agencies, including the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, Minnesota Environmental Quality Board, and Minnesota Board of Water and Soil Resources. Karen also had responsibility for the legal work for other state agencies and boards, including the Minnesota Department of Revenue and oversaw all of the tax litigation.

Karen previously led the Consumer Protection and Antitrust Division at the Attorney General's Office and prosecuted numerous landmark cases that gained national attention and resulted in significant monetary recoveries and industry changes. In her government role, she regularly interacted with other state and federal entities on joint enforcement actions, investigations, and regulatory matters. Karen also worked on legislative matters and testified before the legislature. A significant number of the cases involved matters that affected the citizens of Minnesota including issues involving health care, personal consumer products and financial services products.

While in private practice, Karen handled complex litigation matters for clients operating in a variety of industries. She defended national manufacturing companies in multidistrict litigation and class actions involving hundreds of cases across the country. Karen has also litigated many business disputes that benefitted from her business background gained by working in private industry prior to becoming a lawyer.

Karen has led hundreds of enforcement actions and government investigations for the Attorney General, environmental state agencies, the Minnesota health licensing boards, and other state agencies and boards. She uses her investigation and enforcement background to assist clients on regulatory matters, pending government investigations, and enforcement matters to advise them on how to proceed and on how to take proactive steps to potentially avoid or minimize regulatory concerns. Karen represents clients in all stages of interaction with the government and regulator and understands the unique challenges in dealing with these entities. She helps clients understand and effectively deal with government rules and regulations, government inquiries, and lawsuits.

Karen has significant first-chair trial experience and has tried numerous cases in state and federal district and administrative courts. She has also represented clients and argued matters before the Minnesota Court of Appeals, Minnesota Supreme Court, and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.
