Overview

Luke Wolf guides clients through all aspects of litigation with a dynamic skill set that allows him to quickly and efficiently navigate shifting objectives. He has specific experience in class actions, wage and hour litigation, noncompetition agreements, antitrust matters, residential mortgage-backed securities, and shareholder disputes.

Within his primary practice areas of employment law, professional liability defense, and commercial litigation, Luke frequently works with high-stakes matters, preserving the reputations and viability of clients and businesses while protecting confidential information. His ability to thoughtfully and aggressively advocate for intertwining personal and professional interests is a testament to his highly adaptable legal acumen.

Prior to entering private practice, Luke served as a law clerk for the Hon. Edward J. Cleary of the Minnesota Court of Appeals and interned for the Hon. Patrick J. Schiltz of the U.S. District Court for the District of Minnesota, where he first developed his reputation for crafting compelling, concentrated arguments. He also notably clerked for the U.S. Department of Justice's Civil Division in Washington, D.C., during law school.
