Overview

Lydia Bayley brings robust experience in trademark prosecution and intellectual property litigation, regularly counseling clients across diverse industries on effective strategies to fully protect marketable products and services. Her broad experience includes working with businesses in consumer retail goods, information technology, and industrial equipment.

Lydia prosecutes trademark applications and assists in managing clients' IP portfolios to maximize the value and protection of their brands. She regularly works to enforce clients' copyright and trademark rights, helping to safeguard their market position and reputation.

In addition to prosecution, Lydia supports various aspects of patent, trademark, and false advertising litigation, including fact discovery and motion practice, providing comprehensive support throughout the litigation process.
