Overview

McKayla Hendrix helps businesses and industry participants resolve disputes and navigate legal challenges with practical, strategic guidance focused on protecting their interests and achieving favorable outcomes.

Her practice centers on commercial and construction litigation. McKayla assists clients through the various stages of the litigation process, helping them address complex disputes efficiently and effectively while keeping their business and operational goals at the forefront.

Before entering private practice, McKayla earned her law degree with distinction from the University of Oklahoma College of Law. During law school, she was recognized for her academic achievement and advocacy skills, served as a member of the American Indian Law Review, and competed as a member of the National Health Law Moot Court team. Those experiences helped develop the research, writing, and analytical skills she brings to her litigation practice.
