Overview

Tyler Hardman helps businesses and individuals navigate complex business disputes and regulatory matters, federal and state compliance, and corporate governance. He is a diligent client advocate through all stages of litigation, from initial case assessment and discovery through trial and appeal.

Tyler most recently served as a legal analyst for the Utah Division of Securities, where he supported legal and regulatory initiatives involving financial and securities matters, helping prepare for investigations as well as prosecution.

Earlier in his career, Tyler worked in the Division as a securities examiner, where he investigated alleged securities violations, white collar crime, and complex financial fraud schemes; conducted witness and subject interviews; performed legal research and analysis; and utilized forensic accounting techniques to identify potential misconduct. He also regularly collaborated with state and federal agencies, including the Utah Attorney General's Office, the FBI, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, and the U.S. Attorney's Office on investigations and enforcement matters. Additionally, he conducted examinations and audits of broker-dealers and investment advisers to assess compliance with state and federal securities laws and FINRA regulations.
