Overview

Victoria Narezo focuses her practice on a variety of commercial, employment, and general litigation matters. She provides preventive counsel and litigates disputes on behalf of public and private employers in federal and state courts. Victoria has experience at every stage of litigation, from pre-trial proceedings through trial and appeal.

Victoria advises and resolves matters on behalf of employers of all sizes across a diverse range of industries. Most importantly, she takes the time to understand the details and intricacies of each matter. Victoria collaborates with her clients to develop and execute tailored, effective defense strategies that align with their business objectives.

After completing her undergraduate degree at the University of Mississippi, Victoria obtained her graduate degree from Columbia University. She continued her education at South Texas College of Law, earning her Juris Doctor. While in law school, Victoria worked as a clerk for Spencer Fane and has been advocating for the firm's clients since 2021.
