Overview

Franklin Milam represents clients in complex litigation across financial services, real estate, commercial disputes, and product liability matters. He also brings focused experience in antitrust and competition issues, civil rights defense, creditors' rights, and insurance defense – allowing him to guide clients through high-stakes disputes with clarity, strategy, and confidence.

Franklin previously served as an Assistant Attorney General for the State of Tennessee and as a prosecutor in Warren and Edmonson Counties, Kentucky. In those roles, he handled numerous bench and jury trials, giving him firsthand courtroom experience and a practical understanding of how cases are evaluated, litigated, and resolved.

Franklin takes a hands-on, full-service approach to litigation, managing cases from initial strategy through motion practice and trial. Drawing on 20 years in the U.S. Marine Corps, including three tours of duty and ongoing service as a Reservist, he brings discipline, leadership, and calm decision-making to every matter, communicating clearly with clients, courts, and opposing counsel.

Franklin also leverages his master's degree in economics and experience as an economist with the U.S. Department of Labor. This background enables him to analyze financial data, statistics, and damages efficiently and accurately – an advantage in cases where economic issues play a central role.
