Overview

Bill Powers advises nonprofits, PACs, and innovative companies on all aspects of political law and compliance, equipping them to leverage current legal and regulatory trends to maximize political and business outcomes. With almost 20 years in private practice and government, he adeptly guides clients on federal laws, including the Federal Election Campaign Act and Lobbying Disclosure Act; U.S. House and Senate Ethics Rules; Foreign Agents Registration Act, and similar rules at the state and local levels.

Navigating the intersecting variables between private sector innovation and regulatory frameworks, Bill helps his clients translate creative approaches into effective compliance strategies. His unique depth of government and private sector knowledge helps clients bring to market and advance groundbreaking ideas in politics, digital media, and emerging sectors at the intersection of politics and technology, including Artificial Intelligence (AI) and blockchain. With a background that includes serving as Assistant General Counsel for Enforcement for the Federal Election Commission (FEC), Bill effectively and efficiently resolves client matters before federal and state agencies regulating campaign finances, gifts and gratuities, lobbying, ethics, and pay-to-play.

Additionally, Bill conducts internal investigations and provides white-collar defense with a focus on matters related to election law, bribery, and ethics statutes. He has represented clients before the U.S. Department of Justice, FEC, and the Internal Revenue Service.
